- 1. Claims 8-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Claim 8 uses two "especially" clauses, and claim 14 uses another "especially" clause. It is not certain if this subject matter is definitely being claimed or not. Claim 9 uses the phrase "cutting advance or lead angles and clearance or pitch angles." Due to the alternating use of the words "and" and "or," it is not clear exactly what the scope of that phrase is.
- 2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.
- 3. Claims 8-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Jansen et al (5122966). As clearly seen from figures 1-4, Jansen et al is also directed to avoiding interference between a milling tool 10 and opposed turbine blades 12 while the cutter is located in a depression between the two blades. In operation, the tool is moved along a tool path, and a collision as illustrated at 14 is undesirable. As discussed at column 3, lines 15-26, the exact shape of the workpiece is input into a computer, and this shape is the "collision contour" of present claims 8+. The information about the tool shape and dimensions, the machine parameters, and the computer instructions are also input into a computer. The device of Jansen et al then models the successive relative position of the tool and workpiece; that is, the position of the tool relative to the workpiece is "monitored." Should there be an indication that the tool and workpiece will collide, then the operator will change the tool position, orientation, clearance, or pitch angle in order to fix the error and remove any possible damage to the workpiece.

Regarding claim 9, the information about the tool shape and dimensions, the machine parameters, and the computer instructions will include the information about the variables such as the cutting advance, lead angles, clearance, and pitch angles. Regarding claim 10, the "shape of the workpiece portion" of lines 15+ of column 3 will inherently have both of the sidewalls, and thus two collision contours. Regarding claim 13, when the operator sees an interference and takes action to correct it, that is considered to constitute and "error protocol." Regarding claim 14, since the cutter tool shape and dimensions have been input into the system, it is considered to be inherent to change the tool diameter if there should be a collision.
